Our face, our body and each of their movements make for themselves a whole collection of meanings. Knowing which elements matter most in non-verbal communication will undoubtedly be a good ally in the lure of our potential partners, where each look sometimes has much more meaning than a word. But how to understand them? How can we seduce a person through our gestures or movements? Many studies explain to us, for example, that non-verbal communication affects seduction by almost 60%, and it is also interesting to know that the tone with which we speak to the person who attracts us is very important: voice modulation, cadence, intimacy... it is also a great way in which to show complicity, and, in fact, seduce. Seduced by non-verbal communication Existing research on nonverbal communication tells us that this is the aspect we dominate least of all, and that it is beyond our control the most. Our gestures and movements are often guided by a complex world of emotions where, as a rule, we do not know what we express through our hands or eyebrows, or what the nervous movement of the hands. Nervousness, uncertainty and burning are examples that we can convey without wanting to do so through our gestures. When it comes to the temptation that the person who attracts us, it is common for us to feel trapped by a cluster of nerves and insecurities, and it is all these emotions that usually bring us some problems when it comes to controlling the reactions of our own body. We hesitate, we tremble, we get red... The first thing is to certainly be calm and think that we have to be ourselves at all times without showing cunning. But let's look at the keys more closely. First ten minutes: Many studies show us that the first ten minutes are important when we meet someone. A short period of time in which we appreciate if we want to know what the other person is in depth. This is the moment when we analyze his image, his gestures, his attitude, his image of speaking; a moment in time when, obviously, we too will be valued. It is imperative that we show naturalness and sincerity every moment, the attraction will arise on its own, if we show ourselves as we usually do. A set of views and smiles: They have a fundamental weight in the language of seduction. In this case, it is almost always men who look more safe and longer on women. We, for our part, usually make a game of attention avoidance, that is, return views if a person attracts us, but we do not support it for so long as to keep the interest. This is certainly a suitable mechanism for the deployment of seduction. Smile, for its part, is also an irreplaceable work in the language of seduction. It must be sincere, restrained and respectful, and if we accompany it with a slight tilt of the head, we will show sweetness and openness to the other person. The seduction of verbal communication We already know that nonverbal communication is essential in the language of seduction. What we show and transmit through our gestures and movements is fundamental, but just as important is what we express when it comes to conquering that person we attract. Let's see which aspects are often the most relevant: A sense of humor: If we know how to laugh naturally and show a good sense of humor, we will communicate more easily with people. Joy is an excellent weapon of seduction, in captivity and makes the first moments easier, thus in favor of rapprochement. We must also remember that laughter increases serotonin levels by getting the brain to produce positive thoughts and emotions. A smile costs nothing and makes us get a lot of things. It's a great weapon of seduction. Show naturalness: Seduction does not mean getting inside a character to show what we don't. In the long run, we end up facing challenges if we are to follow that line. We must not act artificially. The first step in seducing a person is without a doubt loving ourselves, always keeping our self-esteem and self-esteem well protected and elevated. Accepting and appreciating ourselves is loving ourselves, and if we do not love ourselves, we will never show enough security to seduce or even love another person. A smooth, pleasant conversation where we splash our sense of humor with personal anecdotes is definitely a good start. Spontaneity is also an excellent value in the art of seduction, suggesting that an attractive spark is capable of surprising and engaging at the same time. In essence, we could conclude by saying that the language of seduction does not require excessive mysteries or mysteries. Naturality is the first value we need to demonstrate: to be ourselves at all times, correctly deploying that important language where appearance and smiles are the starting point in which to attract attention. A sense of humour a great ally, where shows intimacy and openness, as well as naturalness, pillars are all ones where security in itself is important and the idea that seducing something exciting, but it is also interesting to allow them to seduce us. Our image is not only what you see, but also what is perceived. Aside from packaging, there are a number of nuances that enhance each person's natural appeal. Nonverbal language sends messages to others as meaningful as words. And, as is the case with them, sometimes it is better to learn to shut up, or use them short. There are attractive people, people with magnets. Most of them surely know how to improve their image, wear outstanding style and use interesting perfume. However, these types of really attractive people often have something else: a number of subtle resources that they know how to handle well, how to seduce better. Body language: the way we move, dance, posture, the way we go ... it's all communicating. Facial expression: conveys emotions and moods, such as eyebrows or a smile. There are several types of smiles, from the most nervous and insecure to the most open and sincere. View: Eye contact itself is a language and is perceived as deeper and more sincere than any word. Also, you can nuance or emphasize what we're talking about, and it's helpful when it comes to marking word shifts. Gestures: More or less a strong handshake, crossing your arms and legs, or touching your hair when it comes to signs that show hidden aspects at first glance. To seduce is to convince, to convince, to change the opinion of another. Thus, the art of seduction not only applies when it comes to flirting, but can be a very useful skill in our day-to-day lives. Having a personal image that enhances both what you see and what you don't see is a really valuable asset that can help us achieve all our goals.
